Detailed findings

Background to this inspection

The inspection

We carried out this inspection under Section 60 of the Health and Social Care Act 2008 (the Act) as part of our regulatory functions. We checked whether the provider was meeting the legal requirements and regulations associated with the Act. We looked at the overall quality of the service and provided a rating for the service under the Care Act 2014.

Inspection team

The inspection was conducted by one inspector.

Service and service type

This service is a domiciliary care agency. It provides personal care to people living in their own houses and flats.

Notice of inspection

This inspection was announced. We gave the service 48 hours' notice of the inspection. This was because we needed to be sure that the provider or the registered manager would be in the office to support the inspection.

What we did before the inspection

The provider was not asked to complete a provider information return prior to this inspection. This is information we require providers to send us to give some key information about the service, what the service does well and improvements they plan to make. We took this into account when we inspected the service and made the judgements in this report. We also looked at notifications received from the provider. A notification is information about important events which the provider is required to tell us about by law. This ensured we were addressing any areas of concern.

During the inspection

We spoke with two people and two relatives. We looked at four people's care records and four medicine administration records (MAR). We spoke with two care staff and the registered manager. We reviewed a range of records relating to the management of the service. These included three staff files, quality assurance audits, incident reports, complaints and compliments. In addition, we contacted the local authorities for their views.

Is the service safe?

Our findings

Safe – this means we looked for evidence that people were protected from abuse and avoidable harm.

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated Good. This meant people were safe and protected from avoidable harm.

Systems and processes to safeguard people from the risk of abuse

- People told us they were safe. One person said, "Yes I am very safe."
- People were cared for by staff that knew how to raise and report safeguarding concerns. One staff member said, "I'd call my manager, Surrey County Council and CQC (Care Quality Commission)."
- The provider had safeguarding policies in place and the registered manager worked with the local authority safeguarding team and reported any concerns promptly.

Assessing risk, safety monitoring and management

- Risks to people's well-being were assessed, recorded and staff were aware of these. The risk assessments covered areas such as falls, nutrition, medication and environment. For example, one person was at risk of falls. Guidance on how to keep this person safe was provided for staff, who were aware of this guidance.
- Risk assessments were regularly reviewed, and necessary changes were made. There were systems in place to ensure that staff were kept up-to-date with changes to care plans so they continued to meet people's needs.
- The provider had a system to record accidents and incidents, we saw appropriate action had been taken where necessary.

Staffing and recruitment

- The provider had enough staff with the right skill mix to keep people safe. Staff told us there were enough staff. One member of staff said, "Yes we have enough staff, and this service is growing".
- Records confirmed there were sufficient staff to support people. For example, where two staff were required these were consistently deployed. People told us staff were punctual and visits were monitored and records evidenced there had been no missed visits.
- The provider followed safe recruitment practices and ensured people were protected against the employment of unsuitable staff.

Using medicines safely

- People received their medicines safely and as prescribed.
- The registered manager ensured people's medicine was administered by trained and competent staff. One member of staff said, "I do administer medicine and creams. I had good training and I get good support."

Preventing and controlling infection

- Staff were trained in infection control and had access to protective personal equipment such as gloves and aprons.

- One staff member said, "I wash my hands and wear gloves with every client".

Learning lessons when things go wrong

- The registered manager ensured they reflected on where things could have been improved and used this as an opportunity to improve the service for people and staff. For example, following a medicine error staff received advice and further guidance.

Is the service effective?

Our findings

Effective – this means we looked for evidence that people's care, treatment and support achieved good outcomes and promoted a good quality of life, based on best available evidence.

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated Good. This meant people's outcomes were consistently good, and people's feedback confirmed this.

Assessing people's needs and choices; delivering care in line with standards, guidance and the law

- The provider ensured people's needs were assessed before they were supported to ensure those needs could be met and individual care plans put in place.
- Assessments took account of current guidance. This included information relating to Care Excellence guidance, data protection legislation and standards relating to people's communication needs.
- People's expected outcomes were identified, and care and support were regularly reviewed and updated.
- Appropriate referrals to external services were made to make sure that people's needs were met.

Staff support: induction, training, skills and experience

- People were supported by skilled staff that had ongoing training relevant to their roles. One relative said, "They [staff] most definitely know what they are doing."
- Staff completed an induction and shadowed experienced staff before working alone.
- Staff told us they felt supported in their roles through supervision meetings with their line managers. One member of staff commented, "I am supported. I also get supervision and spot checks".

Supporting people to eat and drink enough to maintain a balanced diet

- Care plans contained details of people's meal preferences, likes and dislikes. Any allergies were highlighted.
- People were supported with their meals or food preparation appropriately.
- One staff member said, "I mainly prepare meals and prompt and encourage clients to eat and drink."

Staff working with other agencies to provide consistent, effective, timely care to support people to live healthier lives and access healthcare services and support

- People were supported to live healthier lives through regular access to health care professionals such as their GP, dentist or optician.
- Where appropriate, reviews of people's care involved relevant healthcare professionals.

The Mental Capacity Act 2005 (MCA) provides a legal framework for making particular decisions on behalf of people who may lack the mental capacity to do so for themselves. The Act requires that, as far as possible, people make their own decisions and are helped to do so when needed. When they lack mental capacity to take particular decisions, any made on their behalf must be in their best interests and as least restrictive as possible. We checked whether the service was working within the principles of the MCA

Ensuring consent to care and treatment in line with law and guidance

- Staff respected people's choices and decisions. One relative said, "They offer [person] choices all the time."
- Staff worked to the principles of the MCA. One staff member said, "This is about people's decisions. We protect that right for them to make their own decisions."

Is the service caring?

Our findings

Caring – this means we looked for evidence that the service involved people and treated them with compassion, kindness, dignity and respect

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated Good. This meant people were supported and treated with dignity and respect; and involved as partners in their care.

Ensuring people are well treated and supported; respecting equality and diversity

- People told us staff were caring. One person said, "Yeah, they [staff] are all very nice, caring people." A relative said, "Absolutely first class. They [staff] are superb, cheerful and friendly. They are our friends and they are wonderful."
- Staff knew people well and knew how best to support them.
- The service had an equality, diversity and human rights approach to supporting staff as well as protecting people's privacy and dignity.
- The provider recognised people's diversity and they had policies in place that highlighted the importance of treating everyone equally. People's diverse needs, such as their cultural or personal well-being needs were reflected in their care plans. Staff told us they treated people as individuals and respected their choices. One member of staff said, "Of course you treat clients as individuals, they are all different".

Supporting people to express their views and be involved in making decisions about their care

- People told us they were involved in their care. One person said, "I am involved in all that goes on."
- Records showed staff discussed people's care on an ongoing basis.
- Care plans evidenced people and their relatives had been involved in planning their care and support. Plans included personal information and people's preferences.

Respecting and promoting people's privacy, dignity and independence

- People's care plans highlighted the importance of respecting privacy and dignity. People told us staff respected their privacy. One person said, "[Staff] very nice, very respectful."
- People were supported to be as independent as possible. Care plans prompted staff to encourage people to be independent.
- The provider ensured people's confidentiality was respected. Records containing people's personal information were kept in the main office which was locked and only accessible to authorised persons. We saw staff logging on and off computers when not in use. Staff were aware of the laws regulating how companies protect information.

Is the service responsive?

Our findings

Responsive – this means we looked for evidence that the service met people's needs.

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated Good. This meant people's needs were met through good organisation and delivery.

Planning personalised care to ensure people have choice and control and to meet their needs and preferences

- People had individual care plans in place which reflected their current needs including the actions staff should take to support people to meet their intended outcomes and goals.
- People's likes, and dislikes were well known to the staff team and were highlighted in people's care plans.
- The service responded to people's changing needs. Where people's conditions changed, care and support were updated to reflect the person's needs. People were also able to alter visit times to facilitate private or medical appointments. A person commented, "I have just rung (the office) to change a visit time, so I guess they are flexible."

Meeting people's communication needs

Since 2016 onwards all organisations that provide publicly funded adult social care are legally required to follow the Accessible Information Standard (AIS). The standard was introduced to make sure people are given information in a way they can understand. The standard applies to all people with a disability, impairment or sensory loss and in some circumstances to their carers.

- People's communication needs were recognized. Care plans identified, recorded and flagged any communication needs such as poor eye sight or hearing loss, as required by the Accessible Information Standard.
- Staff told us how they ensured effective communication. One staff member said, "Some clients have glasses and hearing aids, so I support them with those. Always reminding them to use them."

Improving care quality in response to complaints or concerns

- Systems were in place to address any concerns raised. The service had responded appropriately to any issues. Learning took place as a result to avoid any repetition.
- One person we spoke with told us knew how to make a complaint and was confident that they would be listened to. They said, "I have the booklet provided that tells me how to complain. I'm sure they would act on it."

End of life care and support

- At the time of our inspection the service was not supporting anyone receiving palliative or end of life care. The registered manager said they would work alongside other health professionals if care was needed in this area.
- There were systems in place to record people's advanced wishes. For example, where people expressed a wish not to be resuscitated, these wishes were recorded.

Is the service well-led?

Our findings

Well-Led – this means we looked for evidence that service leadership, management and governance assured high-quality, person-centred care; supported learning and innovation; and promoted an open, fair culture.

This is the first inspection for this newly registered service. This key question has been rated Good. This meant the service was consistently managed and well-led. Leaders and the culture they created promoted high-quality, person-centred care.

Managers and staff being clear about their roles, and understanding quality performance, risks and regulatory requirements

- People and their relatives told us they thought the service was well run. Their comments included, "I can't fault them" and "Most definitely well run. I'd recommend them to anyone, and I don't say that very often."
- There was a clear leadership structure which aided in the smooth running of the service. Staff were aware of their roles and responsibilities and took pride in their work and supported each other to ensure good care was provided.
- The registered manager had effective quality assurance systems in place. These included, audits of medicine records, care planning, staff files and quality satisfaction surveys. This allowed the registered manager to drive continuous improvements. For example, one audit identified records had not been updated in a timely manner. The registered manager investigated, identified the staff concerned and provided advice and guidance to the staff. Additional support was also offered to staff tasked with this responsibility.

How the provider understands and acts on the duty of candour, which is their legal responsibility to be open and honest with people when something goes wrong

- Staff were complimentary of the support they received from the registered manager and provider. One staff member commented on the lack of blame, and open culture. They said, "She [registered manager] is lovely, approachable and down to earth. We have very good, honest professional management."
- Legislation sets out specific requirements that providers must follow when things go wrong with care and treatment. This includes informing people and their relatives about the incident, providing reasonable support, providing truthful information and an apology when things go wrong. The manager understood their responsibilities.

Engaging and involving people using the service, the public and staff, fully considering their equality characteristics

- Surveys were regularly conducted. The results from the latest survey were positive. People's, and their relatives' views, where appropriate, were also sought at care reviews and spot checks.
- The staff told us there was good team work, they felt involved and were encouraged to attend team meetings. Information was also shared with staff through a secure telephone app. This included updates on people's welfare and conditions, allowing staff to respond in real time to people's support needs.

Continuous learning and improving care

- The registered manager referred to good practice sources to obtain further training, for example, the Social Care Institute for Excellence (SCIE) or The Skills Network and Skills for Care.
- Staff had further training opportunities to aid their personal development or to provide support to people with specific conditions.

Working in partnership with others

- Records showed the provider worked closely in partnership with the safeguarding team and multidisciplinary teams to support safe care provision. Advice was sought, and referrals were made in a timely manner which allowed continuity of care.
