Summary of findings

Overall summary

Marland Court is a care home and at the time of the inspection was providing personal care to 10 people aged 60 and over. The service can support up to 23 people.

At the time of the inspection there were strict rules in place throughout England relating to social restrictions and shielding practices. The ones that applied to the area this home was located were commonly known as 'Tier Three Rules'. This meant the Covid-19 alert level was high and there were tighter restrictions in place affecting the whole community.

We found the following examples of good practice:

Most staff, management and visitors were using personal protective equipment (PPE) correctly and there were procedures in place around the use of PPE. Some aspects of the use of PPE needed to be looked at and we saw that by the end of the inspection, improvements had been made in this area.

We noted good practices around the disposal of PPE.

The provider had processes to minimise the risk to people, staff and visitors from catching and spreading infection. These included weekly testing of staff and at least every 28 days for people living in the home. Hand sanitiser and PPE were available throughout the home. There were signs to remind staff, visitors and people about the use of PPE, the importance of washing hands and regular use of hand sanitisers.

Processes when visitors entered the home needed to be improved. This was to ensure appropriate measures were in place to prevent people bringing infection into the home. During the inspection, the provider representative implemented additional measures and amended policy in this important area of infection prevention.

Where appropriate, 'socially-distanced' visits had been taking place. At the inspection however, and consistent with enhanced restrictions in 'Tier Three', these visits had been restricted and were only allowed in exceptional circumstances.

Visiting rules and process were communicated effectively to people using the service and their relatives. At the time of the inspection, the provider was in the process assessing alterations to the premises to facilitate safe visiting with relatives and friends. We saw the proposals seemed a suitable way of allowing people to see their loved ones when guidance and legislation permitted.

Infection control policy and people's risk assessments had been considered and revised following the pandemic so that people were protected in the event of becoming unwell or in the event of a Covid-19 outbreak in the home.

The provider insisted people were tested before admission and consistent with local guidance, people were not being admitted to the home at the time of the inspection. This will be reviewed as appropriate and in line with any changes in restrictions. We were satisfied the service, staff, people and visitors were following the rules.

To an extent, people's mental wellbeing had been promoted by use of social media and mobile devices so people could contact their relatives and friends. However, not everyone was shielding and activities could start within the home consistent with guidance. The provider representative said that a programme of activities was to be introduced and staff reminded to encourage people to participate.

Staff had knowledge of good practice guidance and had attended Covid-19 specialist training. There were sufficient staff to provide continuity of support and ensure safeguards were in place should there be a staff shortage.

The home was clean and hygienic. A designated cleaner was working throughout the inspection.

Staff had received Covid-19 related supervision and all had access to appropriate support to manage their wellbeing should it be required.

Further information is in the detailed findings below.
