Summary of findings

Overall summary

Kismet House provides accommodation with nursing and personal care. The service is registered for up to nine people. At the time of this inspection there were nine people living at the home. The ground floor accommodates a dining room, lounge, kitchen, and bedrooms. There is access to outside space.

We found the following examples of good practice.

The provider had not had an outbreak of coronavirus within in the home. At the time of the inspection all residents and staff had tested negative. All residents had received their first coronavirus vaccination.

When staff came on shift, they checked their temperature and sanitised their hands on entering the building. At the time of our inspection staff were able to maintain social distance because people living at the service didn't need close support with their personal care needs. Staff wore masks at all times.

Staff had received training in infection control, including how to safely put on and take off personal protective equipment (PPE) such as face coverings, gloves and aprons (if needed). The registered manager and provider carried out regular observations to check on good practice.

We saw staff wearing masks and they described how they would change their PPE if supporting anyone who had coronavirus. Due to the recent increase in coronavirus infections the provider had stopped all visitors coming into the home to reduce the risk of the virus entering the home. People were supported to go out safely by staff.

People living in the home were deemed to have capacity and understood the importance of maintaining social distance in public and wearing masks. People had agreed to limit their usual activities in the community to remain safe. The provider had a policy and procedure in place to check visitors' temperatures, ensure they sanitised their hands, wore PPE and maintained social distancing.

The registered manager and provider told us they would isolate individuals in their room should there be an outbreak of coronavirus. They had contingency plans to manage shared bathrooms safely; this included extra staff to carry out thorough cleaning after each use. Regular testing was carried out, weekly PCR testing for staff and monthly testing for people living in the home, this was in line with coronavirus testing guidance. Staff also undertook a lateral flow test at home before coming on shift.

One person had recently been admitted. They were tested on admission and supported to isolate in their room for 10 days.
