Summary of findings

Overall summary

Rosehill Residential Care Home is a 'care home' providing personal and nursing care to 14 people aged 65 and over at the time of the inspection. The service can support up to 24 people.

We found the following examples of good practice.

The service had a dedicated unit to be used as a designated setting for people with a positive Covid-19 result. The unit has its own communal space and toilet and bathroom facilities and can accommodate up to ten people in single bedrooms.

Staff providing care and cleaning were designated to the unit and would not move between units to reduce the risk of transmission. Tests for Covid-19 were carried out weekly for staff.

Local policies had been developed to ensure staff understood how to work and deliver care safely. Staff had been trained in control of infection, use of PPE personal protective equipment and identification of people whose condition is deteriorating.

Systems were in place to fully sanitise each bedroom when a person moved out and before a new person moved in.

The home had closed to non-essential visitors due to local lockdown restrictions. People were supported to keep in touch with family and friends through regular telephone and video calls.

We were assured that this service met good infection prevention and control guidelines as a designated care setting.

Further information is in the detailed findings below.
