Summary of findings

Overall summary

Garden Hill Care Centre is a care home that provides accommodation and personal care for up to 40 people, some of whom are living with dementia. At the time of the inspection there were 32 people living in the home.

We found the following examples of good practice.

- Systems were in place to help prevent people, staff and visitors from catching or spreading infection. Every staff member and visitor had their temperature taken at the door and were given appropriate personal protective equipment (PPE) to wear. Every visitor had to have a lateral flow test, complete a health declaration and use hand sanitiser upon entering the home.
- The environment was very clean and hygienic. Additional cleaning was taking place around the home, including of frequently touched surfaces. The service also had a fogging machine which was used frequently around the home to disinfect surfaces for extended periods of time.
- The service had sufficient levels of PPE such as masks, aprons, gloves and visors. The administrative staff member carried out weekly stock checks and ordering to ensure the home maintained maximum levels of PPE.
- Staff had undertaken training in Infection prevention and control (IPC) as well as putting on and taking off PPE. There were dedicated Infection control champions in the home who carried out spot checks on staff to ensure they were competent in IPC practices.
- Staff supported people's social and emotional wellbeing. People were supported to keep in touch with their family members via video or telephone calls. There was visiting pod installed in the home for relatives to use on an appointment basis, to visit people.
- People and staff were taking part in the COVID-19 regular testing programme.
