Summary of findings

Overall summary

Tarrant House provides accommodation and personal care for up to seven people who have a learning disability. There were seven people living at the service at the time of the inspection. The service is situated close to Perranporth on the north coast of Cornwall.

We found the following examples of good practice.

A small cabin type building had been erected in the grounds of the service and this was used to facilitate visits from relatives. Visitors to the service had their temperature checked and there was clear guidance displayed regarding the measures in place to protect people, staff and visitors from the risk of infection.

The premises appeared clean throughout. Cleaning schedules were completed on each shift to evidence all areas had been cleaned. Technology was used to support people to wash their hands thoroughly and in line with guidance.

There were sufficient supplies of PPE available to support people generally and when providing personal care. Care staff wore masks at all times. People living at Tarrant House were encouraged to wear masks when they left the service for exercise and a change of scenery.

The registered manager explained how they could support people if they became unwell. This included how staff could promote social distancing and arrangements for laundry and the use of crockery and cutlery.

Staff had completed relevant training for infection control and Covid-19 guidance. All staff took part in regular testing and records were kept to give the registered manager an overview of test results.

As part of CQC's response to the COVID-19 pandemic we are looking at the preparedness of care homes in relation to infection prevention and control. This was a targeted inspection looking at the infection control and prevention measures the provider has in place.

This inspection took place on 23 March 2021 and was announced.
