Summary of findings

Overall summary

Gresley House accommodates up to 30 older people. At the time of our inspection there were 28 people living at the service. The home has three lounges for people to use and a shared dining room. Bedrooms are on the ground and first floor; bedrooms on the first floor can be accessed by a lift. There is secure garden to the rear of the property.

We found the following examples of good practice.

- The registered manager was knowledgeable about best practice guidelines in relation to infection prevention and control. They had reviewed procedures to ensure staff were adhering to this guidance.
- There was Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) around the home. Staff had received infection control training and their knowledge and competencies had been reviewed to ensure they were putting on and taking off PPE in the right way.
- The home was clean, and the staff were using recommended products to ensure it was cleaned effectively throughout the day and touch points were wiped regularly.
- People were generally receiving care in their bedrooms. Some people were living with dementia and moved around the home; the furniture had been arranged to ensure people maintained social distancing.
- Cleaning schedules and staffing levels within the home had been reviewed to reduce the risks associated with the infection and ensure there were enough staff to meet people's needs.
- Testing was completed weekly for staff and monthly for people using the service. People using the service had consented to testing.
- People's temperatures were checked throughout the day to ensure early signs of illness could be identified.
- The infection control policy was up to date and the audits reflected actions had been taken to maintain the standards within the home.
- There were no visitors allowed in the home. Only essential people had entered the home during the outbreak.
