Summary of findings

Overall summary

Stanholm Residential Care Home is a care home without nursing which is registered to provide a service for up to 26 people aged 65 and over who require assistance with personal care. At the time of the inspection 19 people were living at the home. People living at the home had a variety of care and support needs, such as dementia and physical disabilities. The service is provided from an adapted residence offering single occupancy en-suite rooms.

We found the following examples of good practice.

People were well supported by staff to have telephone and internet contact with their family and friends. The service facilitated in person visits in a manner which minimised the risk of infection spread, including outside visits, and visits using a dedicated room with actions to minimise contact between visitors and other people.

Plans were in place to isolate people with COVID-19 to minimise transmission. Staff were cohorted to care for residents testing positive in the event of an outbreak. The service had good supplies of personal protective equipment (PPE) that were readily available at stations throughout the service. Staff were seen to be using PPE appropriately.

Visitors were asked screening questions and to wash their hands with soap and water when they arrived. There were plans in place to implement lateral flow testing for visitors from 8 March 2021 in line with guidance.

Staff had received training on how to keep people safe during the COVID-19 pandemic and staff and people were regularly tested for COVID-19. The building was clean and free from clutter.

Staff ensured people's welfare had been maintained and they had sufficient stimulation, such as additional activities led by staff.
