Summary of findings

Overall summary

Bluebell House Residential Care Home provides accommodation, personal care and support for up to 19 older people. At the time of our inspection there were 16 people living in the home.

We found the following examples of good practice.

There were procedures in place to support safe visiting by relatives or external professionals. Staff undertook screening of all visitors including temperature checks and a questionnaire to determine risks posed by visitors. Rapid response lateral flow tests (LFT) for COVID-19 were completed for all visitors to the home. Visitors were provided with Personal Protective Equipment (PPE) and guided to its safe use. Individual risk assessments had been completed for each person to determine the risks versus benefits for them to continue to receive designated family visitors.

Staff and people were routinely tested for COVID-19 as per best practice guidelines. Staff had regular testing with rapid response lateral flow tests (LFT) as well as standard Polymerase Chain Reaction (PCR) tests weekly.

New admissions to the service were supported in line with best practice guidance. Admissions were expected to provide recent COVID-19 test results, were further tested by the service following admission and isolated upon arrival for 14 days to minimise the risk of potential infection to existing people. These procedures would also be in place should existing people return to the home following a hospital stay.

Staff had been trained in infection control practices and individual risk assessments had been completed for each staff member.

The home was kept clean. Staff kept detailed records of their cleaning schedules, which included a rolling programme of continuously cleaning high touch surfaces, such as light switches, grab rails and door handles.

The service had an adequate supply of (PPE) to meet current and future demand. Staff were using this correctly and in accordance with current guidance and disposal was safe at the time of this inspection.
